

Tech Note: Appending Data to MobileMapper Job Files

18 November 2004

If you upload a job from MobileMapper Office to the MobileMapper receiver, you can open it as an existing job and both edit existing attributes and append new features to the file. However, if you close a job in the field and reopen it before downloading it to the MobileMapper Office, there is a slight chance the appended data will be unreadable. (The original portion of the file is always readable.)

If you need to append more data to a job before you get a chance to download it the MobileMapper Office, open a new job using the same feature library. When you download both jobs during the same session of MobileMapper Transfer, they will be displayed together in the Map Display area as an untitled job. Use the File>Save As function to give this untitled job any name you wish; both jobs will be combined into one.

There is no limit to the number of jobs that can be combined into a single job when they are downloaded to the PC during the same session of MobileMapper Transfer. In addition, you may at any time open one job, import another (as long as it was recorded with the same feature library) and save the combination with any name you wish.
